THE UNITED STATES NAVAL ACADEMY

The Academy Today

The United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland, is the undergraduate college of the U.S. Navy. Its mission is to prepare young men for careers as officers in the Navy or the Marine Corps. The Academy is accredited by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and graduates of its four-year course are awarded the Bachelor of Science degree.

The development of professional officers has been central to the objectives of the Naval Academy since its founding over 120 years ago. It is today. But today's Naval Academy offers considerably more. As a professionally oriented academic institution it provides a broad liberal education and offers in-depth study in 24 major programs. The curriculum is demanding, and its many choices are designed to challenge each midshipman in terms of his own academic aptitudes and interests.

The day is long past when every line officer could be expected to embody all the qualifications and specialties desired or needed in a naval career. Today's Naval Academy, therefore, does not seek to give the same all-inclusive educational package to every graduate. Rather, it undertakes to produce in every graduating class a group of individual line officers—all well trained in basic professional subjects—who collectively possess the wide range of knowledge and capabilities demanded of the officers in our modern Navy.

For breadth in his education, each midshipman must satisfy certain minimum course requirements in the social sciences and humanities, in mathematics and science. To ensure depth, he completes a major sequence of his own choosing from a variety of fields.

Historical Sketch

Annapolis, Maryland, became the center of professional naval education in the United States in 1845 when George Bancroft, then Secretary of the Navy, engineered the transfer of Fort Severn from the Army to the Navy for the establishment of a formal training school for midshipmen. Fort Severn, built in 1808 at the juncture of the Severn River and the Chesapeake Bay to guard the port of Annapolis, had become nearly deserted by the Army. Commander Franklin Buchanan was appointed as the first Superintendent of the new Naval School. He assembled a faculty with four military and three civilian members, thus approximating the 50-50 ratio of today's officer-civilian faculty of 600.

Initially, midshipmen spent a year in class at Annapolis, then three years at sea, returning to the Naval School for their senior year. Courses were offered in gunnery, naval tactics, engineering, chemistry, mathematics, astronomy, French and English.

Eighty midshipmen were enrolled by January 1846. Attrition was heavy during the early years, and Annapolis furnished but 15 to 20 officers to the Fleet each year until the Civil War. In 1851 the Naval School was formally designated the United States Naval Academy and the Board of Visitors first met at the Academy. An uninterrupted four-year course was inaugurated. (Thus, a four-year curriculum first appeared at the Naval Academy long before it became general practice in American undergraduate education.) Intensive training at sea with the Fleet during the summer recesses replaced the years previously spent at sea.

The Brigade of Midshipmen left Annapolis during the Civil War to receive their training in the more secure surroundings of Newport, Rhode Island. Following the War, the Brigade returned to Annapolis to stay. In 1873, the Academy was awarded a certificate by the Paris Exposition for "The Best System of Education in the United States." From 1873 to 1912, the midshipman's course was six years, with the final two at sea. In 1912, the two years at sea were eliminated and the course reverted to four years. During the Civil, Spanish-American, and World Wars the course was shortened to speed the flow of officers to the Fleet. Both World Wars saw the training of large classes of reserve midshipmen and officers at the Academy.

On 25 May 1933, an Act of Congress authorized the Superintendent to confer the degree of Bachelor of Science upon all graduates from and after the date of the accrediting of the Academy by the Association of American Universities. Since the Association had previously accredited the Academy on 25 October 1930, graduates commencing with the Class of 1931 became eligible for the degree. By virtue of an Act of Congress approved on 8 July 1939, the Superintendent was authorized to confer the degree upon all living graduates. In May of 1947, the Naval Academy was accredited by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. The total number of graduates, including the Class of 1969, is 37,435.

The guiding fathers of the Naval Academy have continued updating and upgrading the curriculum through the years. From the inception of the Academy until 1959, however, all midshipmen took the same courses except for their foreign language. Engineering- and weapons-related courses during these years probed the mechanisms and the operation of specific systems and their components. They were hardware-oriented.

Advances in science and the proliferation of highly sophisticated equipment in the Fleet in recent years, together with the broadening of the Navy's international responsibilities, demanded equal sophistication in the early education of its future leaders—education providing a broad knowledge of basic scientific and engineering principles, providing an in-depth understanding of engineering and weapons systems, education tailored to the demands of the many specialized occupational careers offered today's professional officer.

Evolution of the curriculum over the Academy's first 115 years became revolution in its next ten years. In 1959, midshipmen were first permitted to validate previously completed college-level work. Electives were offered in all departments and qualified students were encouraged to carry additional courses or "overloads." For the first time, individualized programs of study became possible. In 1963, a civilian academic dean was appointed, the Academy's Trident Scholar research program for selected first classmen was established, and the Academy's traditional 4.0-based grading system was converted to the present letter-grade system.

A reduction in the number of courses in the basic curriculum, an elected minor for all midshipmen, and achievement of a major by the most capable became a reality with the 1964-65 academic year. The number of electives offered had increased by this time to more than 200 courses.

The strengthening of the Academy's curriculum has continued. Most recently, in the 1969-70 academic year, a further reduction in the number of required courses in the basic curriculum has made it possible for all midshipmen to complete one of the 24 majors offered. The area of the curriculum directly related to the naval profession—navigation, leadership, operations and tactics, etc.—was broadened to better prepare midshipmen for their duties as young officers. At the same time, the program of summer training at sea was overhauled to provide an experience more relevant to both the professional training at the Academy and the capabilities demanded of young officers in the Fleet.

Today's choice of majors includes Aerospace Engineering, Marine Engineering, Mechanical Engineering, Naval Architecture, Ocean Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Systems Engineering (Weapons), Mathematics, Applied Science, Physics, Chemistry, Analytical Management, General Management, Oceanography, Operations Analysis, Economics, Foreign Affairs, History, Political Science, Literature, European Studies (French, German or Italian), Far-Eastern Studies (Chinese), Latin American Studies (Spanish or Portuguese), and Soviet Studies (Russian). There are more than 400 elective courses.

Qualifications of the faculty have kept pace with recent improvements in the curriculum—improvements in which the faculty has played a vital role. Today, more than forty percent of the civilian faculty possess the doctorate and most of the officers on the faculty have at least a master's degree.

An Academic Advisory Board of distinguished educators, businessmen, and naval officers, appointed by the Secretary of the Navy to advise the Superintendent on academic matters presented to the Board, held its initial meeting at the Academy in 1966. The fall of 1966 also saw the inception of the Academy's Immediate Graduate Education Program under which midshipmen who have completed requisite graduate-level studies at the Academy may be selected to enroll in accelerated master's programs at participating civilian universities or at the Naval Postgraduate School immediately after graduation.

Physical facilities have improved greatly through the years. Acreage has increased from Fort Severn's 10 to more than 300. Much of this increase has resulted from a series of landfills in the Severn River. The most recent landfill, completed in 1959, added 56 acres for athletic fields and new buildings. Construction of buildings in the present French Renaissance style began in 1899 with a Congressional appropriation of 10 million dollars. Mr. Earnest Flagg of New York was the architect.

Recent years have seen the addition of new wings to Bancroft Hall, the midshipmen's dormitory; the construction of a field house for indoor athletics; the construction, with privately-donated funds, of the nearby Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium; and the construction of a Brigade Library and Assembly Hall. The six oldest of Bancroft Hall's eight wings have been completely modernized.

A major construction and rehabilitation plan is underway. Key structures in this plan are a science building, Michelson Hall, named for Albert Michelson, a graduate of the Class of 1873, a former member of the faculty, and the first American scientist to be awarded a Nobel Prize, and an adjoining mathematics building, Chauvenet Hall, named for Professor William Chauvenet, distinguished member of the Naval Academy's first faculty. Both were completed in the summer of 1968.

A 750,000-volume library, a new engineering building and laboratory complex, and a 2,500-seat multi-purpose auditorium are included in building plans of the next four years. Extensive facilities for student and faculty research, computer-aided education, and educational television are included. All academic areas will be air-conditioned.

Appointment to the Naval Academy

* An asterisk indicates those midshipmen whose aggregate multiples place them in the top 10% of their class. Midshipmen so indicated in the graduating class receive diplomas which read: "Graduated With Distinction." Members of a lower class indicated with an asterisk are passing with distinction to date.

The diplomas of midshipmen whose aggregate multiples for the completed course do not place them in the highest 10% of the class, but are not less than 75% of the maximum aggregate multiple, read: "Graduated With Merit." All others read: "Graduated."

Indicates those midshipmen who received diplomas with a degree of Bachelor of Science in a branch of Engineering in which they completed a major.

Class standing is determined by the Aggregate Multiple, which is computed by weighting the grades received in academic work, at-sea training, aptitude, conduct, and physical education according to the coefficients listed below. Bonuses are added for appointment to midshipmen officer ranks during first class year.

GENERAL INFORMATION CONCERNING MIDSHIPMEN PROGRAMS, SUMMER 1969

AT-SEA TRAINING—FIRST AND THIRD CLASSES

The mission of midshipmen at-sea training during the summer of 1969 was to provide midshipmen with a practical working knowledge of the Navy and of the ships in which they were embarked. All midshipmen were fully integrated into the ship's organization, where they were assigned specific and meaningful duties in support of the ship's administration and operations.

The objectives were to provide midshipmen with afloat training and with the opportunity to visit various U.S. and foreign ports in order for them to:

- Develop a sense of attachment to, and pride in, ships and the seafaring way of life.
- Learn the organization of Navy ships and the responsibilities, duties, and privileges of the fighting men who live on board.
- Observe the employment, power, and mobility of naval forces.
- Apply knowledge acquired in the classroom in a sea environment.
- Broaden their cultural backgrounds.

The basic training concepts for midshipmen participating in the 1969 training were as follows:

- Midshipmen First Class trained on board Atlantic and Pacific Fleet ships as midshipmen, but were assigned to junior officer billets. They were given opportunities to assume the responsibilities of junior officers in as many departments as practical during summer training. They were assigned definite duties and responsibilities in these billets commensurate with their training status. Additionally, they were afforded essential wardroom indoctrination through berthing and messing in wardroom facilities to the maximum extent feasible.

- Midshipmen Third Class: Increased emphasis at the Naval Academy on professionalism, on the professional education and training of midshipmen, was reflected in the revitalized at-sea training program for Third Class midshipmen during the summer of 1969. Third Class were embarked for six weeks in two two-ship units (one unit in each of the Atlantic and Pacific Fleets). Port visits were made to Hamburg, Germany, and Portsmouth, England, for the Atlantic cruise and to Seattle and Hawaii for the Pacific.

These two-ship units were fully committed to Naval Academy training requirements and were not simultaneously required to fulfill other fleet operational requirements. Officers and First Class midshipmen embarked on the ships from the Naval Academy conducted the training program. The training schedule made maximum use of each ship's layout and equipment to reinforce the academic instruction in professional courses received at the Academy.

Included in the training were (1) indoctrination and training in shipboard evolutions and tasks under both normal and emergency conditions, (2) standing of enlisted watches and the performance of enlisted-type duties, (3) training in operation of the ship and its equipment, and (4) an introduction to the duties of a junior officer.

MIDSHIPMEN PROGRAM, SUMMER 1969

Foreign Exchange Midshipmen Training

Twenty-six First Class midshipmen trained in the navies of thirteen foreign countries: Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Denmark, France, Great Britain, Italy, New Zealand, Norway, Spain, Sweden, and West Germany. Midshipmen had the opportunity to represent the United States and the U.S. Navy in foreign lands and to participate in foreign social, cultural, and professional programs.

SUMMER TRAINING-SECOND CLASS

The Class of 1971 (less 330 midshipmen who were assigned to the Plebe Supervisory Detail to assist with the summer training of the incoming class at the Academy, the Class of 1973) was divided into three groups of about 200 each. Second Class midshipmen assigned to the three groups completed summer schedules which included four weeks of professional training at the Naval Academy; ten days of aviation orientation and indoctrination in Pensacola, Florida; one week of submarine training at New London, Connecticut; five days of amphibious training at Little Creek, Virginia; and approximately 30 days leave.

Midshipmen assigned to the Plebe Detail had a summer schedule which included professional training at the Naval Academy, indoctrination of the Class of 1973, aviation training at NAS Oceana, Va., and approximately three weeks of leave.

SPECIAL VOLUNTARY PROGRAMS

Volunteers from the three upper classes were afforded the opportunity during their leave period to undertake airborne training at Ft. Benning, Georgia, and jungle warfare training at the School of the Americas in the Panama Canal Zone. Midshipmen completing airborne training were awarded paratroopers wings.
